The Lord appointed seventy-two others...

In the Lord's day, the Sanhedrin comprised seventy men, and Moses was accompanied by seventy elders when he went to the mountain to learn about the covenant God wished to make with his people. Therefore, the Lord's appointment of seventy-two missionaries was a sign to the people that something greater was now taking place. These chosen ones he sent out in pairs and this too was significant because, under the Mosaic Law, trustworthy evidence was given by two people and so their preaching could be accepted by those they would encounter. At the same time, they would also be a companion to each other in this great work, and they would also demonstrate peace by working together. We still see this same pattern being employed by some Christian groups today as they knock on doors to tell people about their faith.

The disciples were sent out without purse or sandals and in this the Lord was emphasising the haste that was required – the mission couldn't wait for them to get the materials together to make their journey a more pleasant one, but had to go that moment.

By virtue of our baptism, we are successors of the seventy-two and so we have a duty and a responsibility to spread the Good News of Jesus Christ throughout the world, each in his or her own way. In today's world and in our own country we can expect some form of rejection for this and, when we do, we must remember and take courage in the fact that Jesus too was rejected, and yet he has been raised to eternal life and we too will be raised if we are faithful to him. There is as great an urgency in this task today as there was in the Lord's own time, and we cannot delay in living the Gospel values in our own lives or in bringing others to the knowledge and love of Jesus Christ.

A SAINT OR TWO THIS WEEK...

St Benedict, Abbot & Patron of Europe

Benedict was born in central Italy in 480. He was sent to Rome to study but left the city for the life of a hermit in Subiaco, not far from Rome, about the year 500. So many gathered around him that he founded twelve communities of monks, but in time left them because of their lack of discipline. He moved to Monte Cassino, on the western coast of Italy, and established the famous monastery there on the site of a pagan temple to Apollo. He wrote a Rule for the monks which has become the foundation of spirituality and monastic life, though it is not believed that he intended starting a religious order. Benedict is the spiritual head of monks in the Western Church, as St Basil is spiritual head of those in the Eastern Church. He died while at prayer in March 547 and was made Patron of Europe by Paul VI in 1964.
